MILK TESTING APPARATUS AT HIGH SCHOOL

Farmers May Test Their Product to Obtain Percentage of Butterfat.

MR. CHALCRAFT IN CHARGE

A 12-bottle Babcock milk testing outfit has been installed in the new Agriculture room at the high school, and the boys in the two Agriculture classes have been busy during the last few days testing the individual cows in their herds for the percentage of butterfat given.

An accurate account of the amount of milk given and feed consumed by each cow is kept. In this way the boys are enabled to select the unprofitable cows and eliminate them from the herd, thus increasing the efficiency of the whole herd. Several cows have been sold already because they were not paying for their feed.

A Junior Cow Testing association has been formed and the boys in this association are now testing over twenty herds of dairy cattle for farmers in the community of Antioch.

It would be advisable for any farmers who wish to have their herds tested to get in touch with Mr. Chalcraft at the high school or to speak to any one of the students in the Agriculture classes and the matter will be taken care of promptly.

High School Five Defeats Waukegan Junction

Friday evening Antioch high school defeated Waukegan Junction in a hotly contested game by a 21 to 16 score. Genoa started off in a whirlwind fashion and it was not until near the middle of the game that Antioch could get its scoring machine working. At half time Genoa was leading 11 to 10. Shortly after the second half started Antioch's team work showed a great improvement and ran the count to 16, when a brief spurt by the visitors enabled them to tie the count at 16 all. The last few minutes of play Antioch scored two field goals and a free throw, while holding the visitors scoreless, ending the game 21 to 16.

The first game of the evening, Antioch high, "seconds" and the town team "seconds" proved a one-sided affair, the school boys winning by a 27 to 3 margin, the town boys being able to gather but one basket and a free throw during the 40 minutes of play, while the high school scored almost at will.

The third game of the evening, between Silverlake and Antioch's Town team proved a thriller for the first half of the game only, when Silverlake let loose a burst of speed. The game started with Antioch scoring three baskets in rapid succession, and Silverlake was aided by one free throw before the first quarter ended. The second quarter was played on practically even terms. Shortly after the second half started, Meyers the diminutive forward of Silverlake "let out" and scored many difficult shots, while the visitors kept the town team well covered.

Tuesday evening Antioch's Town team traveled to Lake Villa and were defeated 24 to 20 in an overtime game. The score at regular time being 20 all. The five minutes extra play resulted in two baskets and the game for Lake Villa. The game was a rough affair throughout, the referee allowing them to "fight it out."

Law Enforcement Meeting at Waukegan Feb. 14

There will be a Lake County Legislative and Law Enforcement Conference in Waukegan on Tuesday, February 14, at the Salvation Army hotel. The afternoon session will be presided over by Judge V. V. Barnes, and attorney Clarence W. Dwyer will act as toastmaster at the banquet at 6 p. m. and T. Arthur Simpson, county superintendent of schools in Lake county will preside at the mass meeting at night at which Hon. John F. Kramer, the first national law enforcement commissioner will speak.

Town Topics

The clock was striking twenty minutes past seven when an alarm was sent broadcast that someone had twined the "one-lunged fliwer" that claims Elmer Hunter as its master. The Kunstabool got "wind" of the affair and proceeded to the village lockup, turned on the lights, dusted off the best bunk in the house and started for the culprit to occupy the domicile, while another, an admirer of said Kunstabool and an upholder of the law, grabbed a shotgun and started on the run to Lake Villa, (probably expecting to overtake Liz.) But not so with our defender of law and order. He's an experienced sloop and knows a criminal always returns, sooner or later, to where the crime was committed. So sitting down where we some day expect to have a curbstone, waited and waited. Several hours later his patience was rewarded, for up came Lizzie puffing and all out of wind. Soon as Liz settled down for a rest, the Kunstabool jumped up and "pinched" the criminal. Liz was all tuckered out and was too tired to tell where she had been. The "criminal" was no other than Art McGreal and to square himself tells that the owner remarked he wished someone would steal the old fliwer, and Art was just seeing how the owner would feel if he should really lose his "pet."

Everyone concerned is still laughing and each claims the joke on the other party, but why make poor Liz the "goat."

Various organizations are adopting the slogan, "Protect The Birds," and it's a good idea. The dove brings peace and the stork brings tax exemptions.

The various tragedies in the movie colonies are becoming more and more numerous, but you gotta hand it to Will Rogers. He sez: "I quit the movies with the same wife I started with." Most of 'em quit their wives with the same movies they started in.

The man who used to have his hair cut by his mother now has a son who has his finger nails cut by a flapper while the barber is shampooing his hair and the porter is shining his shoes.

One good thing about this bobbed hair fad is that your wife can't find any hair pins in the auto.

"A good man is hard to find" used to be a good motto, but "Tommy" O'Connor put that motto on the bum.

Old Father Hubbard went to the cupboard to get himself a drink, and when he got there the cupboard was bare, so he took one from the sink.

Mrs. Eliza Burke, Old Resident of County, Dead

She resided at Antioch until about eight years ago when she went to Waukegan to be with her daughter. Mrs. Walker is also survived by four sons, John of Cameron, Wis., Michael, of Antioch, and Anthony and Peter Burke, of Waukegan. John Walker formerly was editor of the Antioch News.

Funeral from the home of her granddaughter, Thursday morning, at Immaculate Conception church at 9 o'clock. Interment in Mill Creek cemetery.

Mrs. Alice Hyatt Mather to Speak to Parent-Teachers

Mrs. Alice Hyatt Mather is to be the speaker at the February meeting of the Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. Mather is president of the Illinois Vigilance Committee and knows well her topic: "The Cigarette, the Enemy of the Boy."

This is to be an evening meeting so all parents may attend. The pupils of the seventh and eighth grades will give an interesting program. There will be an exhibit of school work and refreshments will be served.

HEIRLOOM DAY PROVES BIG SUCCESS

Woman's Club Meeting Well Attended and Many Interesting Relics Shown

ARTICLES 150 YEARS OLD

The program given at the Woman's club, Monday afternoon proved very interesting. "Heirloom Day" was a decided success. The attendance was large and the afternoon thoroughly enjoyed by the club members and numerous guests present.

The committee in charge take this occasion to thank the friends who so kindly aided by the loan of many interesting family heirlooms. The collection would have graced any museum.

Time and space permit only a brief mention of a few of the many objects of interest.

Side by side with an England drinking horn used in the latter part of the 17th century, lay a saxophone brought from England in 1836, the property of J. C. James.

A companion piece was a clarinet brought to America from England in 1831 by Joseph Christopher James. These instruments are hand made and known to be over one hundred and fifty years old.

A tall brass candlestick to which was attached this note from J. C. James, "My mother used to make her own candles and I have carried this old candlestick to my bedroom many times when I was a kid."

Close by stood an old black lantern with perforated sides and tallow candle, brought to Illinois from New York in the early '30's and owned by Mrs. Smart.

A cow bell—used to put on one of a herd of cattle, when Lake county was all woods and inhabited by Indians, to enable the owners to locate the cattle at night.

A device used for making bullets during the Civil war. This "ammunition factory" of the '60's is now owned by Billie Brooks.

A pestle and mortar used by physicians to mix and prepare medicines.

An ash urn of untold age brought from England and used as a receptacle for the ashes after cremation now owned by Mrs. Ernest Brook.

An enormous hollow flat iron, which our foremothers filled with hot coals when ironing day came. It is more than seventy-five years old and is the property of Mrs. Smart.

A large beautiful white silk shawl containing sufficient material to make two modern gowns in one hundred and fifty years old and owned by Mrs. H. H. Grimm.

Another beautiful shawl of black cashmere containing twenty yards of material, owned by Mrs. Jas. Gray.

A soup ladle, at least 200 years old loaned by Mrs. Herman Fox. Teaspoons and ladle of solid brass, property of W. J. Darby, brought to America in 1699, having been in the family four generations. Date about 1705.

A set of spoons, hand made from eel silver in 1807, together with two silver goblets from a silver service given to Mary E. Caldwell of Shelbyville, Ky., in 1828, new the property of Mrs. Jas. A. Gray.

A clock used by Liberty Corner school fifty years ago. A cameo pin seventy-five years old. Specimens of Old English willow ware, a sugar bowl, dating back more than a hundred and twenty-five years, the property of Mrs. W. W. Warriner.

There were three interesting pictures representing the ruins of the old Glus-tonbury Abbey in England. Cut from Cork and put together by Wm. Laddon, at the age of seventy years.

The cork was put together in such a manner as to represent exactly such of the ruins as are still standing. The original abbey was built in 1184 and 1186. The kitchen, a separate building is made entirely of stone. In it was prepared the daily food of 400 monks.

It is a fine specimen of 14th century work. These pictures together with many rare old book owned in the West-lake family. Scattered about were many old, old books which would delight an antiquarian. A "Life of Washington" published in 1807. A Journal of John Wesley, in book form a copy of Pickwick Papers, and the London Spectator, ranging in date from 1767 to 1814. Quite seventy-five years old, hand woven bed spreads and table

Plan Three-Day Fair for Wilmot This Season

The regular meeting of the West Kenosha County Fair association was held in the building of the Wilmot Union Free high school last Saturday evening. The meeting was quite largely attended, and the active spirit with which the members entered into the discussion shows the extent to which the fair will be pushed the coming season.

The report of Secretary Roy Buf-ton has been filed with the secretary of state, and if the various fairs share the state money as they have in the past, approximately $425 will be received in the form of state aid from the state treasurer, or approximately 80 per cent of the premium money paid out at the last fair.

Treasurer Geo. Dean has in his possession at the present time over $350 which was cleared at the last fair besides $100 which was appropriated by the Kenosha county board. This gives a sum total of $450 excluding what is still due from the state in the form of state aid.

The members of the organization were very highly pleased with the financial outcome of the last fair. Their satisfaction was expressed in a resolution which was passed unanimously and which provides for a three day fair to be held this year. It was also agreed that evening sessions should also be held on the grounds at least two days of the fair.

Under the constitution which was adopted last summer, provisions were made whereby the board of directors was to be composed of twelve members. Four of these members were elected for a period of three years, four for a period of two years and four for a period of one. The terms of A. D. Winn, C. Dyson, Geo. Vincent and Lewis Rhodes expired and the following were re-elected: A. Stoxen, A. Winn, C. Dyson and Lewis Rhodes.

The following are the directors of the organization for the coming year: George Years—Lewis Rhodes, Kenosha; A. D. Winn, Wilmot; C. Dyson, Wheatland; Arthur Stoxen, Basset.

Two years—Wm. Luke, Wheatland; T. T. Hutton, Silverlake; R. S. Hildreth, Wilmot; George F. Dean, Basset.

One year—Joseph Toelle, Wheatland; J. A. Schulte, Wilmot; Wm. Voss, Basset; John Van Lier, Basset.

The board of directors decided to hold the meeting for the election of officers at Silverlake on next Saturday afternoon. The following were the officers during the past year: President—Wm. Luke. Vice President—R. S. Hildreth. Secretary—R. T. Basset. Treasurer—G. T. Dean.

The success met with last year was due to the able management on the part of the officers of the association, to the liberal support given by the board of directors, to the services of the women of the community for the provision of the fine dinners, to the assistance given by the rural and state graded teachers, and last but not least to the people who furnished the exhibits at the fair.

It is hoped that the spirit of loyalty to the West Kenosha County Fair will continue and that the fair of 1922 will be even bigger than the one held last year.

A pleasant surprise in the form of a lunch awaited the members immediately at the close of the session. The lunch was served by the girls of the domestic science department.

13-Month Year Is Proposed for U. S.

The "Liberty Calendar Association of America" proposes there be thirteen months, fifty-two weeks and 364 days, with the odd day called "New Year's day" to come between the last day of December and January 1. In leap year the odd day would be called "Leap Year day," and would come between June 28 and July 1. The extra month is to be called "Vern," because it takes in "vernal equinox" and would begin spring. Each month would consist of twenty-eight days, by arrangement outlined in a bill introduced by Representative Schall, of Minnesota, each day of the month would always come on a certain day. Easter would fall on March 14, and would always be the ninety-ninth day of the year.

DIRECTORS OF MARKETING CO. SPEAK HERE

R. K. Overton W. T. Green Enlightened Dairy Men With Facts

HAVE LARGE ATTENDANCE

The milk producers of this district were enlightened in the affairs of the Marketing Co., last night in talks given by two of its directors, Messrs R. K. Overton and W. T. Green.

Mr. Overton, the first to speak, gave those present a nice talk on cooperation, something that is sadly lacking in the present situation.

Inasmuch as the farmers of this district bear so much unfavorable to the Marketing Co., it is inconceivable in view of the calibre of the men who spoke to them last night that any doubtful thought as to the trustworthiness of the group of officers of the Marketing Co., could be maintained.

Mr. Overton's actions, manners and talk alone should convince the most prejudiced of his sincerity, his integrity for truth, and a man in whom complete confidence could be placed.

Mr. Overton's talk must have made some impression to the farmers of this district to the good work the Marketing Co. is doing, its present good standing, the progress the present executives are making. He explained the fact that of the $700,000 debt of the present executive of which $400,000 was owed for milk and $300,000 of outstanding debts, the $300,000 has been reduced to $45,000 and the $45,000 owed in back arrears was paid on the Marketing Co., to pay the $400,000 milk money over a comfortable margin for operation, paid last over.

The collection of this back money is meeting with great success according to Mr. Overton and the farmers here will soon see the light make some effort to to square up in partial payment and get back good standing with the Marketing Co.

The election of officers next Tuesday will probably clear the situation and the present officers are reinstated these men should be given the full support of the dairy interest for a general and undoubtedly betterment of the milk situation.

Mr. Green gave some very convincing facts as to the why and the for certain actions taken by the Marketing Co., due to the Elgin situation and to his hearers why this was disposed of.

At the annual election of the Producers' Tuesday the national fight appeared, through the plea that the Marketing Co. to obtain a suitable hall for their meeting, adopted a resolution to adjourn the meeting 20th.

At the meeting, held in the Milk Producers Association, a motion was read and a motion seconded to adjourn. Mr. Overton, then called for the names, and conflicting statements given as to the outcome of the election. Mr. Holt declared the motion, and overruled the motion for reconsideration.

The names then adjourned to the Methodist church, which had been called all the time, and proceeded with the meeting. The following officers were elected to head the milk producers for the coming year: Harry Burr of Oshkosh, president; Mr. Knapp of Evansville, secretary; Mr. Hodson of Valparaiso, treasurer.

A Man To His Mate

By J. ALLEN DUNN

COPYRIGHT BOBBS MERRILL CO.

THE GIRL

SYNOPSIS.—Littering on the San Francisco waterfront, John Rainey, newspaper reporter, is accosted by a giant blind man, who asks Rainey to lead him aboard the sailing schooner Karluk. The blind man tells Rainey he is an old shipmate of Captain Simms. In the cabin they find Captain Simms and a man named Carlson. Simms recognizes the blind man, calling him Jim Lund. Lund accuses Simms of abandoning him, blind, on an ice floe, and denounces him. Simms denies the charge, but Lund refuses to be pacified. He declares his intention of accompanying the Karluk on its expedition north, where it is going in quest of a gold field which Lund has discovered. Peggy, Simms' daughter, is aboard, and defends her father.

Lund stood frozen, like a plater on soot, all his faculties united in attention toward the girl. The doctor crossed and spoke to her in a low voice.

Lund spoke, and his voice was suddenly loud.

"I didn't know there was a lady present, miss," he said. "Yore father's right. You let us settle this. We'll come to an agreement."

But, for all his swift change to placidity, there was a sinister undertone to his voice that the girl seemed to recognize. She beatitated until her father led her back into the cabin.

"You two'll sit down!" said the doctor, speaking aloud for the first time, his voice audible, carefully neutral.

"And we'll have a drop of something, Mr. Lund. I can understand your attitude. You've suffered a great deal. But you have misunderstood Captain Simms. I have heard about this from him, before. He has no desire to cheat you. He is rejoiced to see you alive, though afflicted. He is still Honest Simms, Mr. Lund."

"I haven't your name, sir," he went on pleasantly, to Rainey. "The captain said you were a newspaper man."

"John Rainey, of the Times. I knew nothing of this before I came aboard."

"And you will understand, of course, what Mr. Lund overlooked in his mental agitation, that this is not a story for your paper. We should have a fleet trailing us. We must ask your confidence, Mr. Rainey."

There was a strong personality in the doctor, Rainey realized. He did not like the man from first appearances. He was too aloof, too sardonic to his attitudes. But his manner was friendly enough, his voice compelling in its suggestion that Rainey was a man to be trusted. Captain Simms came back into the cabin, closing the door of his daughter's room.

"We are going to have a little drink together," said the doctor. "I have some Scotch in my cabin. If you'll excuse me for a moment? Captain, will you get some glasses, and a chair for Mr. Lund?"

The doctor came back with a bottle of Scotch whiskey and a siphon. The captain had set out glasses and a pitcher of plain water from a rack.

"I imagine you'll be the only one who'll take seltzer, Mr. Rainey," said the doctor pleasantly, passing the bottle. "Captain Simms, I know, uses plain water. I suppose Mr. Lund does the same. And I prefer a still drink."

Rainey took a long pull at his glass. The cabin was hot, and he was thirsty. The seltzer tasted a little flat—or the whiskey was of an unusual brand, he fancied. And then inertia suddenly seized him. He lost the use of his limbs, of his tongue, when he tried to call out. He saw the doctor's sardonic eyes watching him as he strove to shake off a lethargy that swiftly merged into dizziness.

Dimly he heard the scrape of the captain's chair being pushed back. From far off he heard Lund's big voice booming, "Here, what's this?" and the doctor's cutting, in low and eager; then he collapsed, his head falling forward on his outstretched arms.

CHAPTER II.

A Divided Company.

It was not the first time that Rainey had been on a ship, a sailing ship, and at sea. Lacking experience in actual navigation, he was a pretty handy sailorman for an amateur.

So, as he came out of the grip of the drug that had been given him, slowly, with a brain that seemed overstimulated with cotton and which throbbed with a dull persistent ache—with a throat that seemed to be coated with ashes, strangely constricted—a nauseated stomach—eyes that saw things through a haze—limbs that ached as if bruised—the sounds that beat their way through his sluggish consciousness were familiar enough to place him almost instantly.

As he lay there in a narrow bunk, watching the play of light that came through a porthole beyond his line of vision, listening to the low boom of waves followed by the swish alongside that told him the Karluk was bucking heavy seas, a slow rage mastered him, centered against the doctor with the sardonic smile and Captain Simms, who Rainey felt sure had tacitly approved of the doctor's actions.

He remembered Lund's exclamation of, "Here, what's this?"—the question of a blind man who could not grasp what was happening—and acquitted him.

They had deliberately kidnapped him, shanghaied him, because they did not choose to trust him, because they thought he might pilot the story of the island treasure beach in his paper, or bobble it and start a rush to the new strike of which he had seen proof in the gold dust streaming from the pike.

What were they going to do with him?

He mistrusted the doctor. The man had drugged him. He was a man whose profession, where the mind was warped, belittled life. Captain Simms had been charged with leaving a blind man on a broken floe. Lund was the type whose passions left him ruthless. The crew—they would be bound by shares in the enterprise, a rough lot, daring much and caring little for anything beyond their own narrow horizons. The girl was the only redeeming feature of the situation.

He wondered whether anyone had seen him go aboard the Karluk with Lund—anyone who would remember it and mention the circumstance when he was found to be missing. That might take a day or two. At the office they would wonder why he didn't show up to cover his detail, because he had been steady in his work. But they would not suspect foul play at first. He had no immediate family. And all this time the Karluk would be thrashing north, well out to sea.

Rainey would be a front-page wonder for a day, then drop to paragraphs for a day or so more, and that would be the end of it.

But they had made him comfortable. He was not in a smelly forecabin, but in a bunk in a cabin that must open off the main room of the schooner. Why had they treated him with such consideration? He dozed off, for all his wretchedness, exhausted by his efforts to untangle the snarl. When he awoke again his mouth was glued together with thirst. His head ached intolerably. Each hair seemed set in a nerve center of pain. But he was better.

He sat up in his bunk, fully clothed as he had come aboard; the door of his cabin opened and the doctor appeared, nodded coolly as he saw Rainey moving, disappeared for an instant, and brought in a drift of some sort in a long glass.

"Take this," said Carlson. "Put it together. Then we'll get some food into you."

The calm insolence of the doctor's manner, ignoring all that had happened, seemed to send all the blood in Rainey's body tumbling to his brain. He took the glass and hurled its contents at Carlson's face. The doctor dodged, and the stuff splashed against the cabin wall, only a few drops reaching Carlson's coat.

"Don't be a d-d fool," he said to Rainey, his voice irritatingly even. "Are you afraid it's drugged? I would not be so clumsy. I could have given you a hypodermic while you slept, enough to keep you unconscious for as many hours as I chose—or forever.

"I'll mix you another dose—one more—take it or leave it. Take it, and you'll soon feel yourself again after Tamada has fed you. Then we'll thrash out the situation. Leave it, and I wash my hands of you. You can go forward and bunk with the men and do the dirty work."

Rainey felt that he had made a fool of himself, and he took the second draft, which almost instantly relieved him, cleansing his mouth and throat and, as his headache died down, clearing his brain.

"Why did you drug me?" he demanded. "Pretty high-handed. I can make you pay for this."

"Yes? How? When? We're well off Cape Mendocino, heading northwest or thereabouts. Nothing between us and Unalakpa but fog and deep water. Before we get back you'll see the payment in a different light. We're not pirates. This was plain business. A million or more in sight."

"Lund nearly spilled things as it was, raving the way he did. It's a wonder some one didn't overhear him with sense enough to tumble."

"But we didn't take any risks after his blowing off. He might have done it ashore before you brought him aboard. I don't think so. But he might. And so might you, later."

"I'd have given you my word." "And meant to keep it. But you'd have been an uncertain factor, a weak link. You knew too much. Suppose the Karluk fought up to Kotzebue bay and found a dozen power-vessels hanging about, waiting for us to lead them to the beach? And we'd have worried all the way up, with you loose."

"I don't suppose your salary is much over thirty a week, is it? Now, then, here you are in for a touch of real adventure, better than gleaning dock gossip, to a red-blooded man. If we win—and you saw the gold—you win. We expect to give you a share. More than you'd earn in ten years, likely, more than you'd be apt to save in a lifetime. We kidnapped you for your own good. You're a prisoner de luxe, with the run of the ship."

"I can work my passage," said Rainey. He didn't trust the doctor, though he thought he'd play fair about the gold. But it was funny, his assuming control.

"Ah!" The doctor appeared to dismiss the subject with some relief. "Well," he went on, "are you open to reason—and food? I'm sorry about your friends and folks ashore, but you're not the first prodigal who has come back with the fatted calf instead of hungry for it."

"That part of it is all right," said Rainey. There was no help for the situation, save to make the most of it and the best. "But I'd like to ask you a question."

"Go ahead. Have a cigarette?"

Rainey would rather have taken it from anyone else, but the whiff of burning tobacco, as Carlson lit up, gave him an irresistible craving for a smoke. Besides, it wouldn't do for the doctor to know he mistrusted him. If he was to be a part of the ship's life, there was small sense in acting pettily. He took the cigarette, accepted the light, and inhaled gratefully.

"What's the question?" asked Carlson.

"You weren't on the last trip. You weren't in on the original deal. But I find you doing all the talking, making me offers. You drugged me on your own impulse. Where's the skipper? How does he stand in this matter?"

"You're asking a good deal for an outsider. It seems to me, Rainey, I came to you partly as your doctor. But I speak for the captain and the crew. Don't worry about that."

"And Lund?" Rainey had gathered that the doctor resented Lund.

Carlson's eyes narrowed. "Lund will be taken care of," he said, and, for the life of him, Rainey could not judge the statement for threat or friendly promise. "As for my status, I expect to be Captain Simms' son-in-law as soon as the trip is over."

"All right," said Rainey. Carlson's announcement surprised him. Somehow he could not place the girl as the doctor's fiancée.

He rose and bathed face and hands. Carlson left the cabin. The main room was empty when Rainey entered, but there was a place set at the table.

The main cabin was well appointed in hardwood, with red cushions on the transoms and a creeping plant or so hanging here and there. A canary chirped up and broke into rolling song. It was all homely, innocuous. Yet he had been drugged at the same table not so long before. And now he was pledged a share of ungathered gold. It was a far cry back to his desk in the Times office.

A Japanese entered, sturdy, of white-cloth figure, deft, polite, incurious. He had brought in some ham and eggs, strong coffee, sliced canned peaches, bread and butter. He served as Rainey ate heartily, feeling his old self coming back with the food, especially with the coffee.

"Thanks, Tamada," he said as he pushed aside his plate at last. "Everything alright, sir?" purred the Japanese.

Rainey nodded. The "sir" was reassuring. He was accepted as a somebody aboard the Karluk. Tamada cleared away swiftly, and Rainey felt for his own cigarettes. Some one was snoring in a stateroom off the cabin, and he fancied by its volume it was Lund.

It was a divided ship's company, after all. For he knew that Lund, handicapped with his blindness, would live perpetually suspicious of Simms. And the doctor was against Lund. Rainey's own position was a paradox.

He started for the companionway, and a slight sound made him turn, to face the girl. She looked at him casually as Rainey, to his annoyance, flushed.

"Good afternoon," said Rainey. "Are you going on deck?"

It was not a clever opening, but she seemed to rob him of wit, to an extent. He had yet to know how she stood concerning his presence aboard. Did she countenance the forcible kidnapping of him as a possible titbit? Or—?

"My father tells me you have decided to go with us," she said, pleasantly enough, but none too cordially, Rainey thought.

"You have not been well. I hope you are better. Have you eaten?" Rainey began to think that she was ignorant of the facts. And he made up his mind to ignore them.

"Thank you, I have," he said. "I was going to look up Mr. Lund."

The sentence covered a sudden change of mind. He no longer wanted to go on deck with the girl. They were not to be intimates. She was to marry Carlson. He was an outsider. Carlson had told him that. So she seemed to regard him, impersonally, without interest. It pleased him.

"Good Afternoon," said Rainey. "Are you going on deck?"

"Mr. Lund is in the first mate's cabin," said the girl, indicating a door. "Mr. Bergstrom, who was mate, died at sea last voyage. Doctor Carlson acts as navigator with my father, but he has another room."

She passed him and went on deck. Carlson was acting first mate as well as surgeon. That meant he had seamanship. Also that they had taken in no replacements, no other men to swell the little corporation of fortune-hunters who, knew the secret, or a part of it. It was unusual, but Rainey shrugged his shoulders and rapped on the door of the cabin.

It took loud knocking to waken Lund. At last he roared a "Come in."

Rainey found him seated on the edge of his bunk, dressed in his underclothes, his glasses in place. Rainey wondered whether he slept in them. Lund's uncanny intuition seemed to read the thoughts. He tapped the lenses.

"Hate to take them off," he said. "Light hurts my eyes, though the optic nerve is dead. Seems to strike through. How're ye makin' out?"

"You know they drugged me." Rainey ended his recital of the interview he had had with the doctor.

"Knockout drops? I guessed it. That doctor's slick. Well, you're not much fault to find, have ye? Carlson talked sense. Here you are on the road to a fortune. I'll see yore share's a fair one. There's plenty, I ain't a bad fellow you've fallen into, my lad. But I'll look out for ye. And I'll need ye."

He lowered his voice mysteriously. "Ye're a writer, Mister Rainey. You've got brains. You can see which way a thing's heading. You've heard enough. I'm blind. I've bin done dirt once aboard the Karluk, and I don't aim to stand for it ag'in."

"I ain't got eyes. You have. Use 'em for both of us. I ain't asking ye to take sides, exactly. But I've got cause for bein' suspicious. I don't call the skipper 'Honest' Simms no more. And I ain't stuck on that doctor. He's too bossy. He's got the skipper under his thumb. And there's something funny about the skipper. He ain't the same man. Maybe it's his conscience. But that doctor's runnin' him."

"He's going to marry the captain's daughter," said Rainey.

"Simms' daughter? Carlson goin' to marry her? Um! That may account for the milk in the coconut."

His face became crafty, and he reached out for Rainey's knee, found it as readily as if he had sight, and tapped it for emphasis.

"Simms is Carlson's dog. The doc's got somethin' on him, mark me."

THIN FRAIL PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE TANLAC

Hundreds of Men and Women All Over America Appear To Be Physical Wrecks Simply Because Their Systems Are Starving for Nourishment.

There are hundreds of thin, run-down, nervous men and women all over the United States who should be strong, sturdy and vigorous, with rich, red blood tingling through their veins and feeling brimful of life and energy, if they would only profit by the experience of others all over the United States and Canada, and assist nature to digest the food they eat, by simply taking Tanlac.

Millions of people have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by Tanlac after other remedies have failed, but large numbers of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and a return to normal health and strength by its use.

In fact, so phenomenal have been the gains in weight by thin, frail people through the use of Tanlac that this remarkable preparation is now being proclaimed everywhere as the World's Greatest Tonic.

The food people eat does them absolutely no good unless they digest it properly. When you suffer from indigestion and other forms of stomach trouble, the food does you harm instead of good, because food which is not digested stays in the stomach and ferments, causing pains, swelling, gas on stomach, shortness of breath, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness and many other disagreeable symptoms. If this condition is permitted to run on for an indefinite period the entire system becomes saturated with poisons, the patient becomes thin and pale and in time various complications are apt to result.

Tanlac is a powerful reconstructive tonic and quickly overcomes this condition by aiding nature to eliminate the impurities from the system in a natural way and enable the vital organs to properly perform their functions. That is why it is called Nature's Medicine.

In fact, there is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive and assimilative organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the entire system. Next, it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest its food and convert the nourishing elements into bone, blood and muscle. The result is you feel strong, sturdy and well with the proper amount of flesh, as Nature intended. Sold by all good druggists.

SUNDAY SERVICES:

Sunday School 9:45
Morning Service 11:00
Epworth League 7:00
Evening Service 7:45

Last Sunday morning the World's Morning Watch was presented. It was explained that the only way to keep the religious life from being weak and anaemic is by seeing that the spiritual life is fed daily from the great fountain of spirit life in God through prayer and that the one great reason so many are failing to receive adequate spirit sustenance is just the fact that prayer gets crowded out too often by other things. It was shown that prayer is always crowded out except where a definite plan makes specific provision for prayer.

The Morning watch was set forth as the best plan yet devised for making regular provision for prayer in the life of the individual, each one enrolling in the World's morning watch pledging "at least fifteen minutes a day for quiet meditation, scripture reading and prayer." The enrollment cards were presented at the close of the service and the cards show thirty-five already now enrolled. Every comrade should be very careful to keep the pledge faithfully. Real spiritual revolutions have been worked in thousands of lives by keeping the Morning watch. Any person not enrolled and wishing to enroll will see the pastor.

The evening service stressed the warning of Jesus that every soul must be always ready for the coming of life here, bringing it out forcefully that when the great hour of final decision comes in any man's life, the final decision will be almost sure to go the way the man has been deciding day by day through the years. "Be ready now, and be ready every day and every hour of your life," was the final appeal.

The pastor extended a pressing invitation to any not yet saved to seek an interview with him and is extending the same invitation to all in the community who have not found a definite experience of salvation to come for an interview. It was explained that the great majority of unsaved people really do not know how to find the way of salvation alone and must have help, and that the pastor has given the best of his life to preparing to help, and actually helping those seeking the way of salvation, having been privileged to lead hundred to the fountains of living water where they asked their thirsty spirits and found the great new joy that none know save those who have really found God.

The coming Sunday morning the theme is "Thy Word is Truth." The evening theme will be "What shall I say to God?"

Let nobody miss any of the service except for reason he can give to God at the judgement.

Let every one take God's word for what it says and "bring his whole life into the storehouse."

Newspaper Editing

The sort of newspaper that would be published if everybody edited it would be something wonderful, but nothing that anybody would subscribe for. The newspaper business is perhaps the most competitive of any in existence. People who make up newspapers must have the mass of the people in mind every moment. No newspaper can live by catering to a chosen few. There is not in any community enough business to support a large newspaper designed especially for what are slangily called the high-brows. The high-brows are a vague class, but are commonly supposed to be the type of citizen who take no interest in any subject except one concerning things that would be discussed in a faculty or a fine arts convention or a symposium of the higher clergy. No daily newspaper made to fit a clientele of intellectuals or near-intellectuals could subsist itself on what the intellectuals would be willing to pay. A new author made himself unpopular some time ago by saying that as far as he had observed most of the criticisms of his books had come from that class of readers who never buy books, but are keen for borrowing them and picking them to pieces. It might be said of some of those who are severest in their condemnation of the daily press that they do not have to pay its bills nor do they contribute greatly to its support.

'Hold Your Horses' Majestic Attraction

Rupert Hughes, the famous novelist, who wrote the story of "Hold Your Horses," which will be shown at the Majestic theatre Saturday draw the inspiration for his plot from an actual incident which he witnessed in New York a good many years ago.

"Hold Your Horses" tells the story of a meek, oppressed, brow-beaten Irish immigrant whose self-confidence was suddenly aroused by having a red flag thrust into his hand by the fireman of a blasting gang and being told to hold back the traffic.

"When I first went to New York, quite a few years ago, I was riding on a horse car and saw just the thing that I have put in my story," said Mr. Hughes. "Standing in the middle of the street was a scrawny little Irishman, with a flat chest and a piping voice. He held in his hand a flag and was ordering the crowd to keep back. The crowd did keep back, and I could see in the fellow's manner a consciousness of authority which he had never felt before."

"I turned to my companion and said: 'I'll bet that little fellow goes home tonight and beats up his wife.'"

That is just what Canavan, the principal character in the photoplay did. His stout and domineering spouse was in the habit of tossing skillet at his head on his arrival, but this time Canavan hurried home and showed his wife an excellent imitation of a "Donnybrook Fair." This was the beginning of an important change in the man's whole life.

Durability

Take for example the new spiral bevel ring gear and pinion which replaces the former straight tooth construction in Chevrolet rear axles. By this arrangement the power transmitted through the pinion gear is brought to bear on a greater number of ring gear teeth at all times, and is distributed over a greater bearing surface. The pinion bearing also is mounted on the hub of the pinion gear, closer to the driving load.

The result is greater steadiness and sturdiness, longer wear in all parts affected and the elimination of noise which all means more economy and satisfaction for the owner.

To make absolutely certain of this result the utmost care is used in every operation in building the new rear axle and a rigid inspection given every part after each operation.

BRIEFS OF VARIOUS NEWS

The sale of Griffin's garage, purchased two months ago by Wilbur D. Gring, to Elmer Faulkner, of Waukegan, and E. L. Suttie, of Zion, was announced last week, the deal being made by G. R. Green & Co. It is reported that the consideration was in the neighborhood of $50,000. Suttie & Faulkner took immediate charge. Mr. Suttie, who is well known in this territory as an automobile man, is in charge as manager.

This is one of the oldest garages in Lake county, being established by Elvin J. Griffin, undersheriff, eleven years ago. During recent years the business has been managed by Sheriff Griffin's sons.

Attorney Robert F. Marshall, of Harvard, has definitely announced his candidacy for the office of county judge of McHenry county at the republican primaries in April. Mr. Marshall has been talked of as a possible candidate for several weeks, but now he states he is in the race to win if possible.

James F. Casey, who has also been considering being a candidate, has made no definite announcement.

Judge Charles P. Barnes, who was selected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Hendricks, will be a candidate to succeed himself.

Mary, Charles and John Straka, residing in the Russell neighborhood, who made the hurried transcontinental trip to Czechoslovakia with their father, Paul Straka, in an effort to see their grandmother alive, failed in their attempt, it was learned today when their mother received word from them that they were four days too late.

George Sheldon, of Fourth Lake, had a narrow escape Sunday afternoon when the auto in which he was riding turned over at the viaduct on West Grand avenue.

Sheldon was coming in to Waukegan and at the viaduct he passed Larry Doolittle who was returning from a fishing trip to Lake Geneva. As Sheldon swerved back onto the road his brakes caught, and the car turned over in the ditch.

Sheldon was alone in the car and was not hurt. Motorists following Sheldon helped him right his car, and he came into Waukegan to have one window repaired.

DISPLAYS OF LINGERIE ARE BRIGHT WITH COLOR

A RAINBOW in fashion's sky might be made up of the new lingerie which has just made its annual debut; it is so colorful. Of course, while it is something more than a memory, but the displays are gay with color, including light turquoise blue, light and rose pink, peach, yellow and orchid in several tones, and gray in silk.

Much emphasis is put on style in the early showings and perhaps this accounts for the apparent dominance of tailored ideas. All the silks are used, but crepe de chine is far and away the favorite. Tailored models confine their decorative features to hemstitching, fagoting, small tucks, herringbone stitch and bindings in contrasting colors or narrow bands of it, let in with hemstitching. Whoever wishes to follow the mode in this tailored fancy need only to study the matched set shown in the picture above, where pale blue satin is used for a step-in and a chemise to match.

In spite of the glamour of this silken sheen few women are lured away from the refinement of soft cotton fabrics adorned with hand work that depend upon pretty ribbons for a color note. It can afford to stand and wait in the background while new styles are flaunted. It is sure of itself.

In chemise and combinations, and chemises, shoulder straps of ribbon appear to have almost replaced the built-up shoulders. Speaking of ribbons, it is not to be overlooked that they play an important and often an essential part in lingerie, adding the prettiest of finishing touches to all sorts of garments. Many women are adopting bloomers and chemises to take the place of chemise or combinations, and bloomers are made in the same silks and colors as petticoats; glove silk is especially adapted to them and is woven in plain and drop-stitch stripes.

Dead Sea and Mediterranean.
The old question of the origin of the extreme saltiness of the Dead sea has received a new answer. It has been shown, after demonstrating that the soil and rocks can have furnished but a fraction of the quantity of salt that has collected in the Dead sea basin, that the most important source of supply of this salt is atmospheric transportation by winds from the Mediterranean. This view, it is thought, is confirmed by the fact that the ratio of chlorine to bromine in the Dead sea is the same as in the Mediterranean.—Washington Star.

'Diamonds Adrift' at Crystal Theatre Next Sunday

Black cats may have brought bad luck, but not to Bob Bellamy. He won Omar from "Home Brew" Hanson, first mate on the steamship Alexander, at cribbage, risking only $20 as his part of the bet. He thought the cat was worth about that. Actually, the value of the animal and its strange collar was more than $20,000, and in the end Bob would not have given up what the cat brought him for thirty millions.

The story is told in "Diamonds Adrift," by Frederick J. Jackson, an Earle Williams production, directed by Chester Bennett. It will be shown at the Crystal theatre on Sunday.

Finding that his son, besides spending the $200 a month allowance since leaving college, has run up bills amounting to $5,000, James Bellamy decides to give him a job as supercargo at $50 a month and make him repay the amount of the bills. Bob accepts the task somewhat ruefully but gamely and goes aboard the steamer Alexander, figuring it would take him about eleven years to pay back that $5,000 which he had squandered.

Bob was destined, however, to get the $5,000 far more quickly and dramatically than by earning it as supercargo. One voyage to Mexico won him more than twice the amount and a beautiful bride as well, but only after he had been through wild adventures and narrowly escaped death.

A cape is a covering for one's shoulders, a protection; a chaperon was originally a kind of hood, also a protection, now a protector; slipping off one's cape (ex capiti) one makes one's escape. From cape also is derived "chapel," originally a shrine in which was preserved the cape of St. Martin.

Why "Station to Station" Long-Distance Calls Cost You Less

You can save about twenty per cent on your toll bills by using our "Station to Station" long-distance service. To complete a call for a telephone number or for a listed telephone rather than for a particular person requires less time and avoids holding the line at the distant point while search is made for the person wanted.

Here are some sample forms for putting in "Station to Station" calls.

Signal the operator in the usual way and ask her for long distance. When the long-distance operator answers say:

"Give me St. Louis, Mo. 1234. Will talk to anyone."

"Give me Milwaukee, Wis., Smith, Brown & Company. Will talk to anyone."

"Give me Louisville, Ky.; James Robinson's residence, 648 Mulberry St. Will talk to anyone."

In a very great majority of cases it is found that a call made in this way either reaches the particular person wanted or the person who answers can take the message or handle the business.

Specimen rates for "Station to Station" and other classes of long-distance service may be found in the telephone directory. The manager will be glad to give additional information.

A FRIEND IN NEED A FRIEND INDEED

Writes Mrs. Hardee Regarding
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Calif.—"I must tell you that I am a true friend to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken it off and on for twenty years and it has helped me change from a delicate girl to a stout, healthy woman. When I was married I was sick all the time until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in bed much of my time with pains and had to have the doctor every month. One day I found a little book in my yard in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and I read it through and got the medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and took eight bottles and used the Sanative Wash. Let me tell you, I have got many women to take it just by telling them what it has done for me. I have a young sister whom it has helped in the same way it helped me. I want you to know that I am a 'friend indeed,' for you were a 'friend indeed.'"

CARDINAL RATTI IS ELECTED POPE

Archbishop of Milan Proclaimed
Pontiff in Succession to Late Benedict XV.

TAKES THE NAME OF PIUS XI

Earned Gratitude of Vatican Authorities for Important Ecclesiastical
Functions When Polish Question Was Acute.

Rome, Feb. 7.—Cardinal Achille Ratti, archbishop of Milan, was proclaimed pope in succession to the late Benedict XV today (Monday). He has taken the name of Pius XI.

Thousands waiting in front of St. Peter's for a wisp of smoke to tell of the election of a new pope or the failure of the sacred college to reach a decision, gave a mighty cheer at 11:34, when a thin wisp came from the Sistine chapel. It was then known the Catholic church had a duly elected pontiff. Cardinal Ratti was elected on the seventh ballot.

Sketch of His Career.
Cardinal Achille Ratti, archbishop of Milan, was for several years papal nuncio in Poland, where his discharge of important ecclesiastical functions when the Polish question became acute earned for him the esteem of Benedict XV, and the gratitude of Vatican authorities. It was because of this service that the red hat was conferred upon him on June 21, 1921.

Born in Italy, Oct. 12, 1858, Cardinal Ratti was born in Italy on Oct. 12, 1858. For many years he was librarian of the Ambrosian library and archivist at Milan. Later he became librarian of the Vatican. In this position he remained until the new republic of Poland established official diplomatic relations with the Vatican at which time Ratti was appointed archbishop and was assigned to Poland as the representative of the Holy See. That country was then torn with the estrangements from religion brought about by the Communist propaganda from Soviet Russia, and Archbishop Ratti counteracted the spread of radicalism. He also won the esteem of Polish Catholics by his efforts in behalf of destitute children orphaned by the war.

As soon as the two-thirds vote for Cardinal Ratti had been verified, Cardinal Vannutelli, as dean of the sacred college, arose and proceeded to the throne of the chosen one, accompanied on either side by Cardinals Logue and Bissett, respectively deans of the cardinal priests and the cardinal deacons. He was asked in Latin by Cardinal Vannutelli, in accordance with custom, if he accepted the election to be supreme pontiff, and the new pope answered with the formula: "Since it is the will of God, I must obey."

Canopies Let Down.
Then the purple canopies over the throne of the cardinals were let down, one by one, until only that over the new pontiff remained. This was done to show that the whole sacred college rendered obedience to the new head of the church. Dean Vannutelli thereupon asked the new incumbent what name he chose to take during his pontificate, and upon his reply "Pius XI," Mr. Sincero, secretary of the conclave, verified his election to the papal chair.

Meanwhile Pope Pius XI, after waiting for some moments in the Clementine hall, had left for St. Peter's, accompanied by the members of the sacred college. Arriving at the balcony at the entrance inside the cathedral, he raised his hand and bestowed upon the multitude his first public benediction. He then returned to the Vatican where, although reigning the pope's have remained virtual prisoners until their deaths.

The Heathen Come to Light.
A Wisconsin newspaper, the Boston Transcript says, reports the following:

The young people here have a new game called "Christianity." Here is how they play it: The Christians, who are the girls, get one one side, and the boys on the other are the heathens; then the heathen cross over and embrace Christianity. It has become very popular.

The stern man isn't always behind in his business.

A Lover of Quiet.
"You wouldn't think it to look at me, sir," said the seedy caller in quest of a famous jazz orchestra. Even if I do say it, I was a hen with drums, cowbells, dishpans and cymbals."
"You were, eh?" replied Mr. Grumpson. "Well, I'm a wolf for peace and quiet. I've discharged no less than 17 stenographers for tapping on the floor with their toes and rapping on desks with pencils."

"In that case," said the seedy caller, "hustly, I'll wish you good morning."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Didn't Advertise It.
"Isn't it queer that Methuselah lives to be 900 years old, and many other men lived to be very aged in Bible times, without a woman living to be that old?"
"It isn't a bit queer. It merely shows that women were the same then as now. What woman would ever confess to being a thousand years old?"

Kissing Custom Centuries Ago.
Three hundred years ago it was a sign of hospitality for the lady of the house to welcome the men guests in her husband's presence with a kiss. It might be on lips, forehead or cheek. An interesting reference to the freedom of kissing in olden times is introduced by Sir Walter Scott in "The Fair Maid of Perth," where one of the characters says: "Thou knowest, the maiden who ventures to kiss a sleeping man, wins of him a pair of gloves."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Double and Single.
"Marry him if you will, but be warned," the dear friend said. "He will lead a double life."
"Maybe he will," responded the maiden who was no longer in life's spring, "but I'd rather he led a double life than that I led a single one."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

LUNCHEON OR SANDWICH ROLLS

4 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
6 teaspoons Dr. Price's Baking Powder
1 tablespoon shortening
1½ cups milk

Sift together flour, salt and baking powder; rub in shortening; add milk, and mix with spoon to smooth dough easy to handle on floured board. Turn out dough; knead quickly a few times to impart smoothness; divide into small pieces; form each by hand into short, rather thick tapering rolls; place on greased pans and allow to stand in warm place 15 to 20 minutes; brush with milk. Bake in very hot oven. When almost baked brush again with melted butter. Bake 10 minutes longer and serve hot. If a glazed finish is desired, before taking from oven brush over with yolk of egg which has been mixed with a little cold water.

These rolls make excellent sandwiches, using for fillings either lettuce and mayonnaise, sliced or chopped ham, chopped seasoned cucumbers, egg and mayonnaise with a very little chopped onion and parsley, or other filling desired.

The MYSTERY OF THE SILVER DAGGER

"Look to the right! What is that?" It was a dull, red glow, a mere pinprick in the black curtain, yet it seemed to change in brilliancy, like an evil eye winking at us out of the dark. There was something uncanny about the thing, yielding me no suggestion as to what it could be, yet frightening by its baleful gleam at such a time and place. Then there was borne to my nostrils the faint odor of tobacco smoke; it must be a man sitting there smoking; what was the red tip of his cigar?

Could we slip by unheard? I doubted it, yet whatever happened, one of us, at least, must escape from the house before any alarm was sounded. There was but one chance left—for her to slip silently down that other flight of stairs to the street door, while I remained behind to protect her flight. If there was no alarm, no notice taken of her passage, possibly I might venture to follow without being overheard; but she must go first, her step was light, and she was more sure of the way. Besides, I could block pursuit, by a fight if necessary, and thus give her ample time in which to unchain and open that front door. Once without these fellows would never follow, I put my lips close against the girl's ear.

"It is a guard there smoking. Don't try to answer, but do exactly as I say. One of us, at least, must get out; you stand the better chance, with my remaining behind to hold these fellows back if there should be any alarm. If there is not, I'll follow. Do you understand?"—"Answer" with your hand."

I felt the firm pressure of her fingers in quick response.

"The fellow evidently hasn't heard anything yet—you better go."

I felt her creep past me without a sound, her hand slipping from my grasp as her foot touched the level floor of the hall. She was invisible, no longer even a shadow in the black gloom. Then suddenly from somewhere a chain clanked faintly; the car could not determine from what direction the sound came, yet it was clear enough to be heard plainly. The man stood still, evidently listening. I lost sight of the red glow, as though he had removed the clear from between his lips, and slowly straightened myself up, braced for any emergency. She had reached the outside door, and was preparing to open it. For an instant nothing happened. Then the sharp, resounding click of a heavy lock echoed up from beneath, like the tap of a hammer.

The fellow snapped on the electricity, flooding the large hall, and uttering a grunt, started forward. We met face to face. There was nothing else for it but to fight it out. If I ran the act would only expose her before she could distance pursuit; besides that first glimpse had revealed my antagonist, and I was glad—I was almost at the same instant, splitting open a curse as he reached back for his gun.

"You, hey! How the hell did you get down here?"

But I was quicker, the move ready, gripping the wrist, and twisting the arm back until the torture caused him to drop the weapon, as we struggled back across the width of the hall. We were both weaponless, relying only on the efficacy of bare hands, but he turned into a savage, a dangerous fighter who cared only to disable his opponent in any way possible. It was like battling with a wild cat, infuriated, crazed with hate and fear. And for the moment the fellow had me, less before the fierceness of his assault.

Some one was coming. I could hear a voice, and flying steps on the stairs; then a woman's scream somewhere above. I broke away, getting a grip on his throat, and feeling my feet firm on the floor. He could see what I could not, and found voice in spite of my throttling.

"It's that d-d ekunk. Severn, got out. Hit him, Ivan! Smash in. I've got the guy—quick now!"

I whirled with him, ducking my own head behind his shoulder, gaining as I did so one blurred glimpse of Waldron as he swung full at me with what looked like the leg of a chair. Harris caught the full force of the blow just over his eyes and the power of it, added to the swirl of my arms, sent him hurtling along the rounded rail, heading down the stairs. Waldron stood paralyzed, stunned, his hands still on the club, his eyes following that flying figure. With all my strength I drove a flat foot to his face, and as he reeled, stumbling backward, endeavoring to retain his feet, I sprang past, and raced down the steps.

The body lay at the bottom motionless, huddled up in such fashion as to block the door. Without a doubt but that the man was dead, I thrust the form to one side, leaped through the opening, and crashed the door behind me.

I turned to the left, afraid of the bright light, and the street-cars, and plunged into the depths of the alley. I may have gone a mile, twisting and turning before I came to what evidently was a small hotel. Here I encountered a cab, an old horse cab, the driver half asleep inside. An old-time caddy was not liable to care who his fare might be so long as he was well paid. Encouraged by this reflection, I stepped over to the curb.

"Engaged, my man?" He came to life in an instant, tumbling out of his comfortable quarters to face me.

"No sir. I never heard you comin', sir. Bin a bit quiet about here to-night."

He stopped, as though just noticing my appearance under the dim street lights.

"Yer bin hurt, sir?" he asked solicitously. "Yer coat's all tore, and there's some blood on yer face."

"A small light, that's all. In a saloon over west. Any place around here where I could wash up?"

"Sure, right in yere; there ain't nobody 'round to bother. I'll show you."

He opened a little side-door, and I followed down a narrow hallway, to a small washroom, hung off my coat, and filled a basin with water. The caddy turned up the light, and watched me curiously. He was evidently delighted to have some one to companion with at this weird hour of the morning.

"They got yer one good 'un, any-how," he remarked. "Feller what struck yer must've had a ring on ter make that gash."

"There were two of them," I answered, spluttering through the water I was using liberally. "I may have hurt one of the fellows, so you keep still—will you?"

"Me! Sluicks, I don't talk about my fares none. That ain't business. I picked one up night before last, down by the west-side docks, who'd how, he was sure scared half to death. Looked like a foreigner, an' was druggin' a grip 'long with him. Got off at Jersey ferry, I reckon."

"When was that?" I was using the towel by this time, drying the loquacious speaker over the edge.

"Night afore last, 'bout midnight; I'd had a fare down the way, an' was drivin' back empty, when he feller tumbled in like there was a ghost after him, an' sed I was ter drive like h—!"

"Had a grip with him, did he?"

"Yap; black, 'bout medium size. The fellow wasn't overly big himself, an' it was quite a lug for him; it bumped against his legs when he toted it. I wouldn't a thought nothin' 'bout it, only I got hot of a paper, an' read how there was a guy croaked that same night over in this feller, just because he was so where he had me set him down, too."

"Where was that?"

"Colmar buildin' on Broad street, bottom. He didn't let me pull up ter let him out a block away, around the corner. But somehow I sorter went, so I slipped off the box, an' took a peek. He turned in there, where it cink, an' that's the last I seen of him. S'pose he was the duck who did that job sir?"

"He might have been, of course. Did you report it to the police?"

"Lord, no; if us fellers told the cops half we know they wouldn't get no sleep at all. I ain't sed nothin' to nobody. Ready to go now, sir?"

CHAPTER XIII.

In the Colmar Building His horse was not a fast traveler, yet this afforded me time to think over my own situation, as well as the clue so unconsciously furnished me by the loquacious driver. The chances were that this mysterious passenger of two nights before had there remained with the Alva case; yet the place, his evident fear of pursuit, the heavy bag he carried, and his being a foreigner of some kind, all combined to stimulate my suspicion. The fellow could be beyond guess. The Colmar building, my recollection of the place was vague, a huge pile on Broad near Wall, devoted largely to brokers' offices, absolutely deserted at night, except by scrubwomen and a watchman or two. A tenant might slip in at such an hour, yet he would be fortunate indeed to escape the observation of some one along the halls, or on the staircase. I felt confident a careful questioning among the night employees would give some line on the identity of the man, even if there should prove no other means of locating him.

One thing was settled; I must go back to the hotel. If I was to pay my bill and depart I would lose all connection with Minnie Gessler; she would then possess no means of finding me. I could not seek her, but she possessed my address, and must surely endeavor to communicate with me before night. The only thing, then, was to remain and wait for her to call. Yet this surely exposed me to the danger of arrest, if Waldron named me to the police in connection with the death of Harris.

Yet by this time I was firmly convinced that the Russian would either lie outright in the affair—claiming that Harris' injuries had resulted wholly from a fall downstairs in the dark—or else would swear them upon some unknown invader who had escaped after knocking him senseless. Certainly he would never reveal the truth, unless compelled to do so. To do so would queer his whole game.

That is, it would if his game was anything as I had doped it out. If he, working alone, or with some accomplice, as now appeared more probable, had been concerned in the Alva murder, his main object at present would assuredly be to escape detection, and get a division of the spoils. His one desire would be to remain out of sight, and in order to do this he must shield me from arrest.

I awoke at eleven, rested and with a clear brain. Nothing had occurred to disturb me, and, as I looked at the watch and realized the hour, felt no longer a doubt but what Waldron had found some way in which to protect us both. Eager to look over the noon editions myself, I dressed rather hurriedly, and descended to the lobby. The paper secured was devoid of particulars, "Gentleman George" Harris, well known to the police, had been found dead in the hallway of a rooming house on Le Comptre street, operated by Mrs. Sarah Waldron. It is believed to have been a thieves' quarrel from the evidence of those in the house, who heard the sounds of a struggle, and saw a strange man escape through the front door. There were no arrests, although the police were searching for certain parties who might be implicated.

So far so good; but now what about the Russian? He had evidently escaped suspicion, yet would be far from easy in his own mind. The situation in which he found himself would only serve to increase his desire to secure the money, and get safely away while the going was good. If he actually knew where such money was to be had, he would scarcely delay seeking it.

If he had personally hidden that bag of currency taken from Alva, he would be after the stuff within twenty-four hours; while if another held it, he would as surely seek the fellow me two lines to follow. This gave Waldron, and shadow him; or I might see what discoveries I could make in the Colmar building. The better chance seemed to me lay in Broad street. I ate a deliberate lunch, planning how best to proceed, and hoping some bellboy would call me to the telephone. I finished the meal uninterrupted.

Both Wall and Broad streets were busy enough when I elbowed my passage through the shifting crowd of men hurrying in every direction, and reached the edge of the curb, gazed upward at the ornamental front of the Colmar building.

I took an elevator to the twelfth floor, and walked slowly from end to end of the marble corridor, reading the names on the glass doors as I passed. I met but few people and attracted no attention, passing down the stairway to the floor below. Growing more pessimistic as I proceeded, I had reached the fifth floor, when, as I turned at the front of the iron stairs, my glance rested on the letters sten-pled along the frosted glass opposite—"Mutual Investment Company, Gasper Wine, Manager." I stopped still, my heart beating wildly, feeling that I had stumbled blindly on the very thing I had been seeking. Gasper Wine was the name of the man who, through accident, had opened to me the door leading into the Alva factory; the man who had left me alone in the entry while he disappeared to talk with Alva privately in the little side-room. Gasper Wine! For the first time I really believed the old hack driver was right—he had actually picked up just such a fare, lugging a bag with him, and driving the fellow to this place at midnight. I had never connected the crime with Wine before—yet why not? He was among those present; he had been alone with Alva; he doubtless knew of the transferring of the money; and he answered fully the description of the man the caddy had picked up near the Jersey docks.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. For example, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years, is almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale.

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills all liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by enclosing Post, Address and enclose two cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores. Advertisement

History and Mystery of

Archie Gibson's Life

Archie Gibson lived here in Lake Villa over thirty years without anyone suspecting anything out of the ordinary in his life. Thirty-four years ago his wife took their three children, two girls nine and five years old and a boy one year old and left him. The two older children she gave into families, keeping the boy with her for a while, later giving him to Hiram Gibson, a cousin of Archie Gibson and where he grew up. He remembers his grandfather on his father's side, but has no memory of his father. Both daughters remember their father well. His wife divorced him and married again—she is still living and is 71 years old. He left New York state and must have come almost directly to Lake Villa, where he has since resided, married and had a family who passed away before him. He did not let his relatives in New York know where he was or anything about him until ten years ago when he broke the silence of years by writing to a niece in New York, but requested her not to let any of his immediate family know anything about him or his whereabouts, threatening, if she did that he would leave this place and they would never hear of him again. He died Oct. 14, asking friends to telegraph to his niece of his death after he had passed away. This was done. She then wrote to his daughter, Mrs. Covey, who now resides at Battle Creek, Mich., of her father's death. She lived twenty years at Plano, Ill., before going to Michigan a year ago, never knowing that she was near and in the same state that her father lived. Last week a son Charles Gibson, 35 years old, and

Mrs. Covey, second daughter of Archie Gibson, came to Lake Villa, having heard that their father had been a pauper and buried in a pauper's grave, hoping to take his body home with them. They found everything much different and as it is Mrs. Covey spoke of her father's loving care when she was a small child and showed much feeling for him. The older daughter lives in Billings, Montana, is married and has children who have children. Thus Archie Gibson was a great-grandfather before he died. This is the story told to Lake Villa by his children, who were ready with proofs of their story. They were treated with every respect while here and many spoke of their resemblance to their father and of many characteristics which proved the truth of their story.

Methodist Episcopal Church News

SUNDAY SERVICES:

Sunday School 9:45
Morning Service 11:00
Epworth League 7:00
Evening Service 7:45

Two strong addresses were given at the church last Sunday by Professor Rollo A. Kilburn, of the University of Chattanooga. He cited the vast sweep of the history of God's dealing with human life, demonstrating from it all that God is sufficient to answer all our unmet needs and that, even though we are in a period of turmoil and uncertainty, and even though we should be compelled to see crashing about our heads the ruins of long cherished ideas and systems, yet we shall be safe and find that God will bring out of it all a better civilization than we now have, we will but fully trust in God and ourselves to His service. Pointing to the millions of bushels of grain America seeking a market and the lions of starving people in other lands, he made it clear that we must do something to remedy this and feed starving brothers or lose our place as a Christian people. It is at this time the Methodist church, through its benevolent offerings, is feeding large numbers who otherwise starve to death, and is at the same time giving to them the gift of eternal life. The pity of it that the funds are not large enough to take care of larger numbers. Everyone who reads these offerings is asked to pray definitely that it will put it into the hearts of people to make larger offerings for this crying need to save and save souls. More than twice as much as is being received is sorely needed by our workers in the needy for this work. Every time any money is put into the benevolent envelope he is helping in Christ like work of saving lives and saving souls. And the more he gives, the more it helps. Also, it is not forgotten that the offerings are given to the church, and the church is the one that will get to do their work. It is too late to save many lives.

The watch night service was very profitable. Two features of much value were two brief addresses, one by Miss Ella Ames on "Why We Must Win Souls to Christ and the Church," and the other by Miss Deedie Tiffany on "Why Our Childhood and Youth Must Receive More Religious Instruction."

The coming Sunday the morning subject will be "Have Ye Received The Holy Spirit?" The theme of the evening will be "All Have Sinned."

All the Sunday school teachers and scholars are reminded to be watching for any who have been missing and get them back and work up as near one hundred per cent perfect attendance of every member of the Sunday school as possible and also to be on the watch for new ones who should be in their classes. Consult with Brother J. C. James, head of the department of extension on plans of how to get folks to attend.

Nash, Cadillac, Hudson Essex and Buick Announce Slash in Cost

Nash, Buick, Hudson, Essex and Cadillac all have announced cuts, running as high as $940 on the Cadillac. All the new prices go into effect on Jan. 1.

The Ford company will not reduce the price of its cars at this date, said Carl Ohm of Wilson & Ohm, local Ford agents. Mr. Ohm recently received a letter from district headquarters in Chicago denying all reports that the Ford company was to cut prices at any time in the near future.

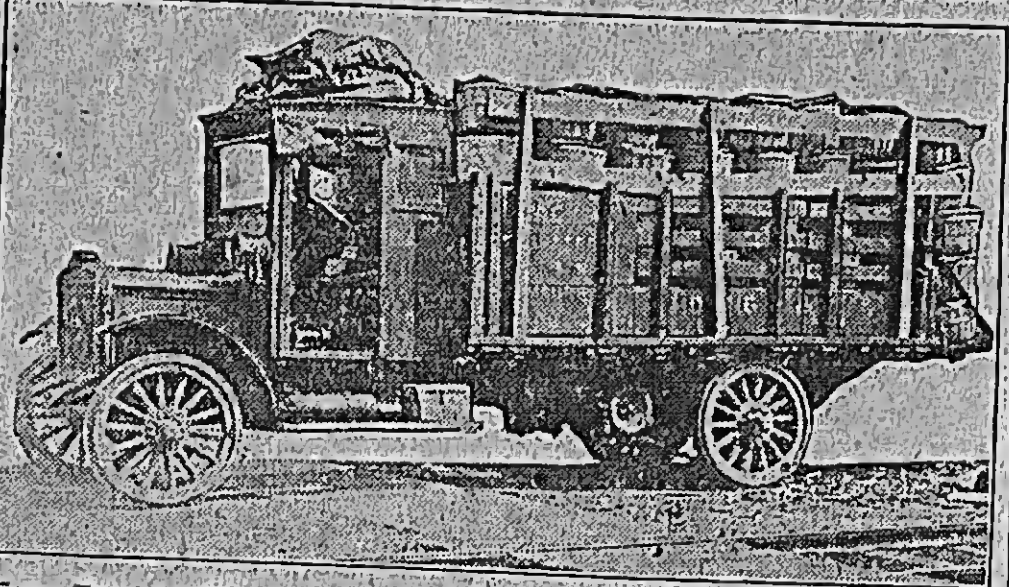

Cuts on Hudson and Essex cars are announced as follows: Seven-passenger touring car, $1895 to $1745; five-passenger, $1895 to $1695; cabriolet, $2495 to $2295; coupe, $2770 to $2570; sedan, $2895 to $2650, and touring machine, $3120 to $2920.

Three Essex models were cut. A reduction of $150 for the coach makes it $1345, and $100 each on the ring car and sedan, reducing these to $1095 and $1895, respectively, announced.

Nash axes dropped $300 on enclosed, $145 on open models, and $50 on four-passenger sport. The two-passenger enclosed four was cut from $5 to $1395.

This is the first reduction announced for the Cadillac car since 1917. The biggest cut is on the suburban, which dropped $940. The smallest cut is on the four-passenger touring.

SOLUTION OF TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS SEEN IN MOTORTRUCK

Farm Truck in This Load Will Go Directly to Dealer at a Market Fifteen Miles Away and Arrive in Fresh Condition.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A steadily increasing number of shippers are looking toward the motortruck for the solution of their transportation problems. Farmers are included in this category, and it may therefore be well to point out, as the result of actual experience of others, the things they should consider in connection with the use of motortrucks to haul their produce to market.

In very few instances, say experts of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture, is it advisable for a farmer to purchase and operate a motortruck solely for his own needs, as the initial investment, cost of upkeep, and the limited time the truck is likely to be in use make the venture expensive and disproportionate to the convenience secured.

Where trucks are operated by private individuals for profit the owner of the truck usually operates between certain points on a fixed schedule. The farmer assumes no risk. He simply pays whatever the rate for cartage may be, and may find the use of this means of transportation an advantage over the railroad or over hauling his produce to market himself by team. At the same time it has often occurred that when the farmer had learned to depend upon this service, the rates would be raised to a point that the farmer could ill afford to pay, or that another motortruck operator would enter the field with the result that both operators were compelled to go out of business, leaving the farmer without any truck service at all.

One Successful Venture.

It may be well to consider the business of a motortruck operator at a nominal cost and create a service upon which he can place full reliance.

There are several co-operative motortruck associations in existence, of which, perhaps, the Farmers' Co-operative company of Hartford county, Maryland, has had the largest measure of success. The territory served by the association is a very productive agricultural region. Many of the farmers ship milk to Baltimore, some raise truck crops and others practice general farming.

The association rates on many commodities are decidedly lower than those of the railroad. The members say that the saving of time in marketing their produce is a big advantage, also. For example, when the farmers loaded their produce to market by wagon they had to start out at midnight and did not return home until nine o'clock the next morning. Now, at least eight hours of that time is saved for other work.

But while the Hartford County company has had considerable success, if conditions had not been favorable for the operation of a co-operative motortruck route. This fact should not be lost sight of; and for the benefit of those contemplating the establishment of co-operative motortruck associations the following points should receive careful consideration:

Factors to Be Considered.

A careful survey should be made to determine the adequacy of present transportation facilities, the reasonableness of the rates charged, the approximate daily tonnage available for movement in each direction, the character of the roads over which the trucks must be operated, and the general sentiment of the community toward such an association. The distance from market should not be more than 40 miles, and there should be sufficient volume of produce to warrant reasonably constant operation of the trucks throughout the year.

It having been concluded that the co-operative enterprise will be a decided advantage, only men who have demonstrated their business ability in handling their private affairs and who exercise a good influence among the members of the community should be selected as directors. The secretary should be a man with energy, tact, business ability, and a high appreciation of the farmer's interests. The capitalization of the association should be large enough to permit the issuance of enough stock to pay for the trucks in cash, to assure a sufficient amount of cash on hand as working capital, and to have enough unissued stock to provide for future sound extension of the business, as well as a depreciation fund to replace worn-out equipment.

Make Service the Watchword.

The trucks should be selected only after a thorough and unbiased consideration of the various makes. Records of performance, of cost of operation and maintenance, furnished by actual operators of trucks rather than by agents of truck manufacturers, should be carefully considered in the light of present and prospective needs of the association.

In employing operators merit should be the sole consideration. Rates should be based on a careful analysis of complete, adequate and accurate information regarding costs. Accounting methods should be simple but sufficiently comprehensive to show the exact financial status of the association at all times.

In determining matters of policy the interests of the members as a whole rather than as individuals must be considered. Service must be the watchword. And to make the association a real success, each member must feel that it is his association.

STATE BUREAUS GET QUICK INFORMATION

Connected With Washington Office by Telegraph.

At Each Point State Officials Are Able to "Listen In" on Market News Messages Being Transmitted to the Offices.

Four state marketing bureaus are now connected with the Washington office of the bureau of markets and crop estimates, United States Department of Agriculture, by telegraph wire. "Drops" from the Federal leased-wire system extend into the state bureaus at Trenton, N. J.; Lancaster, Pa.; Harrisburg, Pa.; and Lincoln, Neb., and at each point the bureaus are able to "listen in" on market news messages being sent to and from the various branch offices of the Federal bureau. Such market information as is of interest to the farmers, dealers and consumers of the four states is copied and given intensive distribution by the state officials.

In most cases distribution of the market news is done by means of special news releases to the daily and weekly newspapers and the farm journal press. In one instance the market information is distributed by means of mimeographed reports mailed direct to farmers and other agricultural interests. In Pennsylvania the work of distribution is facilitated by eight reporters located in important market centers, who supplement the national news with local information regarding supply, demand and prices.

The marked increased appreciation of the value of agricultural market news and its wider distribution through daily and weekly reports is in a large measure due to the progressive program adopted by the National Association of State Marketing Officials, which believes that one of the prerequisites of improvement in the nation's machinery for marketing agricultural products is a national and local market news service that will give producers accurate reports as speedily as possible after the marketing transactions take place.

As Early in Spring as Parsnips and Salsify Can Be Handled, Carefully Dig and Reset Roots.

Parsnips and salsify are hardy, and the roots may be safely left in place through the winter. As early in the spring as they can be handled, and before they start into growth, experts of the United States Department of Agriculture advise, the roots should be dug, carefully sorted, and the selected ones immediately reset from three to five feet apart. They will start into growth at once, and generally will produce a good crop of seed. The parsnip can be safely left in place until the seed crop is fully ripe, when it can be cut and stored under shelter till dry. The heads of salsify opened out as they ripen, and unless gathered, the seed will be blown away. It is necessary, therefore, to gather the opening heads about noon of every sunny day, and spread them in an airy place until dry, when the seed can be rubbed out, winnowed and stored.

PUREBRED STOCK IS BEST

Price Received for Poultry and Eggs Depends Upon Quality of Produce at Market.

There is always a good demand for market poultry and eggs, and there always will be, but like every other commodity, the price received by the seller depends upon the quality of the goods sold. Good, plump, tender chickens properly fitted, always command the top price, while the scrawny, starchy, inferior stuff has to be sold for what ever it will bring.

Advertising is News

It is a safe venture that eighty per cent of the readers of news read advertisements also. There is news value in a well written advertisement, which is a thought for the consideration of those who think an advertising contract is something of a speculation, or who are careless in the preparation of their "copy."

An attractive advertisement compels the reader's attention. Everyone knows how at times, even in the midst of an interesting news item, his eye has been deflected by some outstanding sentence in a nearby "ad," and how he has read the "ad" before returning to the news story. Advertisements narrate the romance of business, they represent in individual art, they are instructive.

For instance, the classified advertisement page. The persons are innumerable who read it, not because they are searching for something definite, but because each little "ad" tells of something of interest to the active mind. Many are those who, reading the classified page because of this general interest only, find something there that interests them individually, prompts a reply, and performs a concrete service both for the advertiser and the reader.

Not Material Only

A city, town or village that is thoroughly imbued with a spirit of optimism, civic pride and co-operation is as sure of progressive results as the one that is permeated with pessimism, slovenly habits, a disposition to wrangle over leadership and find fault with well intentioned efforts, is doomed to business stagnation and social retrogression. And material efforts alone will not bring a full measure of prosperity and happiness to a community, but when they are attended by spiritualized movements with Christian purposes and prayerful consideration, they fail not and all alike are blessed.

Ten Business Commandments

1. Thou shalt not wait for something to turn up; but thou shalt pull off thy coat and go to work, that thou mayst prosper in thine affairs and make the word "failure" spell "success."

2. Thou shalt not be content to go about thy business careless in dress, for thou shouldst know that thy personal appearance is better than a letter of recommendation.

3. Thou shalt not wait to be told what thou shalt do; nor in what manner thou shalt do it, for thus may thy days be long in the job which fortune hath given thee.

4. Thou shalt not fail to maintain thine own integrity, nor shalt thou be guilty of anything that will lessen thine own respect for thyself.

5. Thou shalt not covet the other fellow's job, nor the position he hath gained by his own hard labor.

6. Thou shalt not fail to live within thine income, nor shalt thou contract any debts which thou canst not see thy way clear to pay.

7. Thou shalt not be afraid to blow thine own horn, for he who fail-eth to blow his own horn at the proper occasion findeth nobody standing ready to blow it for him.

8. Thou shalt not hesitate to say "no," when thou meanest "no," thou shalt not fail to remember that there are times when it is unsafe to bind thyself by a hasty judgment.

9. Thou shalt give every man a square deal, this is the last and greatest commandment, and there is no other like unto it. Upon this commandment hang all the law and profits of the business world. O. T.

He is hampered, naturally, by this lawsuit; his mind is diverted, his strength and attention weakened by the attention he must give to this case.

"The case that is embarrassing this man, this governor, is this felony charge, not the misdemeanor charge. It isn't the case where he is charged with being a mere clerk in the office. That is the conspiracy case, where it is charged that the chief man was the State Treasurer Sterling and that Curtis and Small were clerks in his office. That is the case, the misdemeanor case, that they seek to have the order reversed in and that one placed first."

"As I say, the case that is embarrassing our governor not only in Illinois but all over the United States is the case where he is charged with being a felon, that while he was state treasurer, at a time when he had taken an oath of office to transact the duties of that office as a true man ought to do, he stole the money of the people of Illinois."

"Now disposition should be made of the first case. They have charged this man with stealing, while treasurer. That should be tried first. They should be forced to prove that case, or if they haven't a case they should be forced to prove that case, or if they stand upon the records of this court and public opinion that Len Small, while state treasurer, stole money of the state of Illinois. That is the felony case, the one that they should go ahead with. The court has swept every case on the docket out of the way in order to try this case."

The court: (To Mr. Mortimer) "Do I understand you to say that whether a verdict of guilty or acquittal is returned in the conspiracy case, that the other case will be dismissed?"

Mr. Mortimer: "That is true, your honor."

The court: "Why not discharge them now?"

"This man is the governor of this state. The duties of the governor could easily take up all of his time."

"You can't ignore the fact that the defendant in this particular suit is the governor of the state of Illinois, who is charged with embezzlement and has a right to know the reasons as to why that charge was made. Useful Cigar Ash.

Stains may be removed from polished oak very easily. Sometimes we find, to our dismay, a blue stain on our table or buffet top, made from water or some other moisture. Save cigar ashes until you have what you know will be sufficient, when moist, to cover the stain. Do not use any more water than enough to make a thick paste. Spread over stain and allow to become perfectly dry, then brush off with a soft cloth. You will find the surface restored.

DYEING FRESHENS OLD FADED
GARMENTS AND FURNISHINGS

Home Dyeing Is So Easy and Practical That Club Girls Often Try It.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Dyeing can be done at home so easily that the process has been made part of the club work for boys and girls conducted by the United States Department of Agriculture, co-operating with the state agricultural colleges.

To get good results it is necessary to consider the kind of material and its original color as well as the color to which it is to be dyed. Dyes intended for use with wool or silk materials do not produce satisfactory results with cotton. Dyes intended for cotton materials may be used in dyeing silk, wool or linen. For materials which are mixtures of cotton and any of the other materials, or materials attached with cotton, a cotton dye should be used.

It is easy to dye white material any color or re-dye any material the same shade, a darker shade, or black. More skill is required to dye the material an entirely different color. It is impossible to dye any material a lighter color than it was originally unless the darker shade can be bleached out before dyeing. This seldom pays for the labor involved.

How to Combine Primary Colors. Good shades and colors may often be obtained by combining different colors. In dyeing this can be done in two ways. The original color may be combined with a dye of different color, as when blue material is dipped in a yellow dye to get green; or the material may be dyed first one color and then another, as when it is first dyed blue, dried, and then dipped in yellow dye to get green.

Red, blue and yellow are the primary colors. Combining these primary colors in different proportions will produce many different colors and shades. Red and blue produce violet. Red and yellow produce orange. Yellow and blue produce green.

Instead of softening one color with the other two primary colors, it can sometimes be softened by using its complementary color, that is, the color produced by combining the other two primary colors. It is necessary to have patience in testing samples of goods until a successful effect is obtained.

Preparation of Material. If possible, garments should be clipped apart before dyeing. Linings and trimmings should be removed, also all folds, tucks and hems. Materials must be weighed, then washed well in soap and water, for grease and dirt spots are not covered up by dyeing. Rinse well. Use lukewarm water for wool or silk. Dissolve the dyestuff thoroughly in a clean enameled basin, mixing first with only a small amount of hot water and gradually adding more water. Strain part of the dye through two thicknesses of cheesecloth into a clean dye kettle of enamel or agate. If possible, containing three gallons of cold water for every pound of material. Add more dye gradually. Be careful not to start with too strong a dye bath, as it is difficult to lighten the color when once fixed.

For cotton material add salt equal in weight to one-fifth of the weight of the material to be dyed. For wool or silk dye add the same proportion of salt and also at least two tablespoonfuls of strained vinegar for every pound of material. The acid breaks up the dye so that it penetrates more readily into the material. Stir constantly. Test the shade of the dye on a sample of the same material before putting it all in. Remember that it will be darker when wet.

To Dye Evenly.

Before immersing the material stir the cold dye bath thoroughly and wet the goods, otherwise it will dye unevenly. Keep the material in motion in the dye bath to prevent spots, streaks and heat wrinkles, which cannot be pressed out. Gradually bend the kettle to the boiling point, and boil the material at least one-half hour. Boiling deepens the shade. Dye penetrates more quickly into soft materials than into those made of hard, twisted threads. If the material is allowed to cool in the dye kettle the shade will be deeper and the dye more fast.

Rinse thoroughly in cold water until the water remains clear. This prevents crocking. Use two old brooms with rounded ends to press out the dye from the pieces. Use a wringer (which should be washed thoroughly afterwards) for larger garments. Shake the material until nearly dry and hang it in the shade. Press carefully.

"Back to God's Country" Crystal Attraction Sat.

Wellington Playter, who is Captain Rydal in "Back to God's Country," makes a dive, underneath the ice in the frozen Arctic, in a scene from this picture which will be shown at the Crystal theatre, Saturday, Jan. 7.

In the story he loses his life by falling through the ice. He makes the real dive and you see him gradually sinking in the water under the broken ice and it is not until the scene is 'shot' that he awims back to the surface. His final warning was to make the footage short and no retakes.

This beautiful story of the northlands was taken from "Wapiti, the Walrus" in "Good Housekeeping," written by James Oliver Curwood, the foremost portreyer of animal life of the present day.

DILL PICKLES WILL KEEP WELL IN JARS

Weaker Brine Is Needed Than for Salt Variety.

Straight-Sided Open-Mouthed Stone Jars Best Receptacle to Use—Narrow-Necked Bottles Not Satisfactory.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The method of making dill pickles differs from that of making salt pickles in two important particulars—a much weaker brine is used, and spices are added, chiefly dill, according to food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The entire stalk of the dill herb is used. Because of the weaker salt concentration the curing of dill pickles takes only half the time required for ordinary brined pickles, but measures to prevent spoilage are necessary.

In making pickles straight-sided open-topped jars are the best receptacle to use. One holding four gallons is a convenient size. A narrow neck jar is not satisfactory for this purpose.

In the bottom of the jar place a layer of dill and one-half ounce mixed spice. Then fill the jar to within two or three inches of the top with washed cucumbers of uniform size. Add another one-half ounce of spice and layer of dill. If obtainable, place a layer of grape leaves over the top. They may be placed both at the bottom and the top. Grape leaves have been found to have a greenening effect on the pickles. Make the brine as follows: Salt, one pound; vinegar, 4 quart; water, 10 quarts. Cover with a weighted board or plate to hold the cucumbers well below the brine. If packed at a suitable temperature (80 degrees F.) no active fermentation will at once set in. This should be completed in from 10 days to two weeks. If the temperature (80 degrees F.) is maintained, a scum soon forms on the surface, which should be skimmed off.

After active fermentation has ceased it is necessary to protect the pickles against spoilage. The surface exposed around the board cover should be coated with paraffin, or the pickles should be sealed in glass jars or cans when sufficiently cured.

Ceylon's great sport is the hunting of jewels which are often to be found in the beds of rivers. Sometimes these streams are dried up for a time and then the rewards are great for the hunter. Government permission must be granted before one may go to gem hunting, and having obtained this permission, the hunter is allowed to keep all he finds. To the inexperienced eye, the precious pebbles, as it rests on the ground, looks like an ordinary stone, the expert can detect the valuable ones at once.

Used Magnet to Recover Nails.
A ship's cargo, consisting of a million nails, was recently recovered from the bottom of the sea. Many of the hogs containing the nails were broken wide open and their contents were strewn far and wide in the mud. The feat of recovering the nails was easily performed by means of a big lifting magnet.

FARM STOCK

WOOL AND MUTTON COMBINED

Experiment Station Established at Dubois, Idaho, to Solve Sheep Problems.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Sheep breeders, ranchmen and animal husbandmen from six or eight states went to the United States sheep experiment station near Dubois, Idaho, this year for the annual shearing. Keen interest attaches to the work done by this station, especially by those who are alive to the importance of producing, if possible, a breed that shall combine weight in mutton and excellence in fleece, with special reference to market demands for fine or coarse grades of wool. In the shearing this year, just reported to the Department of Agriculture, the Rambouillet scored highest. The report shows the following results:

Average Weight of Wool per Sheep.
Rambouillet	11.14 lbs.
Columbia	10.85 "
Corriedale	10.08 "
Corriedale grades	10.00 "

The station at Dubois was established by the bureau of animal industry in 1917 to conduct experiments with which it was hoped to solve some of the big problems in range sheep business. With only a little more than three years' experience the specialists do not consider the results conclusive to warrant definite assertion in favor of or against particular range practice, but the work has attracted the attention of sheepmen everywhere, and is expected to become increasingly important as the experiments develop.

"It is quite generally agreed," said one of the sheep husbandmen, "that one of the main parts of the range sheep country of the northwestern states is the type of ewes obtained in the first cross between the long wools and the fine wools. Is a very desirable stock ewe. We appreciate the fact that fine wool animals were most popular in 1919, and that this was due in part to the price of fine wool."

side of the business that has been the cause of such large use of crossbred stock. Sheepmen concerned in the business of producing sheep that shall combine mutton and the right kind of fleece watch with interest the development of the Corriedale grades and the Columbias. The Corriedale was imported from New Zealand in 1915 by the bureau of animal industry for this work. The Columbia is the Lincoln and Rambouillet cross, interbred.

WHY PERCHEROIS IS POPULAR

Breed Adapted to All Kinds of Farm Work, and Exceptionally Docile and Sensible.

The modern Percheron is very popular with the American farmer because he is an easy keeper and an early maturer, is hardy and vigorous, but docile and sensible, strong, active and well adapted to all classes of farm work and city use. America had a preference for a black horse which has led to the production of darker colored horses, but, as is evidenced by some of the leading shows of recent years, there is a tendency to revert back to the original color, that beautiful iron gray. It is a good thing that this is true, for a minor point like color should never detract from the value of an otherwise good horse.
